[6.19] Number of sustainability community services project organized and/or involving students (ED.10)

Karunya Institute of Technology and Sciences (KITS) places a strong emphasis on experiential learning and community engagement as key pillars of its mission to serve humanity through education and research. In alignment with the United Nations Sustainable Development Goals (SDGs), the university actively organizes and supports sustainability-oriented community service projects that empower students to apply classroom knowledge to real-world environmental and social challenges. These projects address critical areas such as waste management, renewable energy adoption, water conservation, sustainable agriculture, biodiversity protection, and climate action.

Through these initiatives, students not only develop leadership, teamwork, and problem-solving skills but also cultivate a deep sense of environmental stewardship and social responsibility. Each project is designed to create measurable community impact—enhancing livelihoods, promoting sustainable practices, and fostering inclusive development in surrounding rural and urban areas.
